Rules in the Manor of Fernwood

Whether this is your first murder mystery experience or your fortieth, each murder mystery experience is different and has different rules pertaining. Here are some tips to make sure this evening is an unforgettable experience.

Read Your Character Sheet—This contains your identity and all the information you will need to play your part.

Don't Reveal Everything About Your Character—While there are many things that everyone needs to know about you, there are some things that should remain secret. Use your discretion to not give too much away-- you may find out at the party that you are the killer indeed!

Dress The Part— It's a proven fact that the more into character you are the easier it will be for you to truly enjoy all the aspects of the night. It also adds to the excitement, the photo opps, and your chance to be voted best dressed. Please see the "party extras" section at www.nightofmystery.com for ideas on costuming.

Review the Announcements—Included in this invite will be manor announcements. Review this page, it includes background information (such as the other characters attending), which may come in useful the night of the party.

Use Your Money Creatively—Upon arrival, you will receive gold coins to spend any way you choose. Bribery and blackmail are two of the most common uses we found (and highly encouraged). The wealthiest player at the end of the night will also receive an award for their ability to turn a profit.

Hear Ye! Hear Ye!

It is by decree of the lord and lady of Fernwood that the people of the manor are invited and ordered to attend the noble marriage of their son, Baron Bartholomew, to Lady Diana of Dunnsberry. The wedding is to take place on December Second, the one year anniversary of their meeting. A tournament of jousting pleasure is to follow to commemorate this momentous occasion in which the victorious knight will be awarded many riches plus the lady of his choice as escort for the celebration that night. Those expected to be in attendance are as follows:

King Kyle: The ruler of this prosperous kingdom. He is well liked by everyone. It's hard to have many enemies when the punishment of betrayal is death!

Queen Genevieve: Wife of King Kyle. She rules equally alongside her king.

Sheriff: The king's official in Fernwood. He is in charge of collecting the taxes in the manor, which have been dwindling even though prosperity seems to be at its highest.

Lord Taylor: He runs the manor happily with Lady Gwendolyn. He is throwing the tournament in celebration of his only son's marriage to the noble woman of his choosing.

Lady Gwendolyn: Runs the manor lands with her husband Lord Taylor. She is delighted for the tournament, it means prosperity and happiness & the marriage of her only son to another noble.

Baron Bartholomew: The son of Lord Taylor and Lady Gwendolyn. The tournament is planned in honor of his marriage to another noble on the one year anniversary of their meeting. His only regret is that he must marry for wealth and not for love.

Lady Diana of Dunnsberry: Noble woman of Dunnsberry, she arrived in Fernwood in search of a husband that she found, but at the cost of breaking up one true love.

Maid Monica: She is the one who always caught the baron's eye (and heart). Since the baron's engagement has been set with another woman, some say Monica has turned rather ruthless.

Maid Marilyn: Lady Gwendolyn's lady-in-waiting. Maid Marilyn is like a daughter to the lady and knows her lady will do anything for her happiness.

Sir Rufus: Sir Rufus is a relatively new knight to the manor and does not have as favorable of a reputation as Sir Cameron. He is hoping to increase his popularity with a victory over Sir Cameron in the tournament.

Sir Cameron: A gallant knight who is entertaining and fighting for his honor in the manor tournament. Word is that if he wins, he will be asking for the favor of Maid Marilyn.

Gallant Gary: Squire to Sir Cameron. He will do anything for his knight, Sir Cameron. Gary must prove valor, loyalty and honor in order to gain knighthood.

Charlamagne: As chambermaid, she is the lowest of the servants to live in the castle. Charlamagne knows the castle in and out and has seen a lot. Her access to all of the castle may also be what gets her into trouble.

Poor Pearl: A peasant woman whose small earnings have grown even smaller since the sheriff has been enforcing the laws in the manor.

William the Watchman: As the manor watchman, he is the security for the lord and his manor lands. He is sure to be the enforcer if anyone gets out of hand at the tournament.

Anyone not attending the wedding and celebration will be considered a traitor to the lord and lady and will be banished from the manor.

Laws of the Land

As set forth by King Kyle on how his kingdom is to be ruled

I. Betrayal of the king or queen is punishable by death!!!

II. The lord's word is law in his manor

- a. The only person that can overrule a lord is the king.
- b. A manor consists of a castle, church and the surrounding lands granted to the lord by the king or queen.

III. Everyone that makes earnings, must tithe a percentage of their earnings to the king

- a. Percentages are set by the king or queen .
- b. Tithes (taxes) are collected by the sheriff in compliance with the wishes of the king or queen.

IV. The manor is to be run with a system as follows:

- a. Lords & Ladies—granted land from the king and may run the manor as they see fit. They award land to the vassals and knights in exchange for protection from invaders. Among their duties are arranging marriages within their manor and administering justice.
- b. Vassals & Knights—are awarded land from the nobles of the manor. They are free to farm the land or pay peasants to do so. They may also have serfs that live on and farm their land.
- c. Peasants—often live in huts outside the castle walls and work on land owned by vassals or knights for a percentage of the profits. They still have their freedom, but own no land.

King Ryle

You are the king of an elaborate kingdom made up of many manors throughout your country. You rule the land lovingly and fairly alongside your beautiful wife, Queen Genevieve. You love being king and you value your people. You try to run your kingdom fairly and justly while, of course, making your share of riches.

Currently, you live in your castle, but you are traveling to see the tournament that is to be held to celebrate the marriage of Baron Bartholomew to Lady Diana of Dunnsberry. Baron Bartholomew is the son of the Lord Taylor, the lord of Fernwood, where the wedding and tournament are to take place. The tournament is meant to be a great celebration and features a joust between two knights, Sir Cameron and Sir Rufus. Although, you know Sir Cameron quite well, Sir Rufus' reputation is a little more nondescript, for he has spent much of his time traveling in the kingdom and recently settled down in Fernwood. You know that your Sheriff of Fernwood speaks highly of him, so you are looking forward to making his acquaintance.

Another reason you have for visiting Fernwood is that your tax money seems to be dwindling in the area. (You have always charged 10%, not a penny more or less.) Since it has been years since you have traveled Fernwood, you wonder how prosperous the manor truly is and how well Lord Taylor is doing at running it. You have talked to your wife, Queen Genevieve, about the possibility of letting your sheriff take over the land if you find Lord Taylor unfit for running a profitable and peaceful manor.

Regardless, you are happy to visit Fernwood. It will be a wonderful wedding and tournament no matter what the outcome concerning whether you will be appointing another ruler to the manor or not.

Acting and Dressing Your Part You are the king. Come with all your glory. Don't forget your crown or your robe. You rule with dignity and prestige. You are not vindictive, but fair minded and prefer to see that the kingdom thrives (as well as your treasury). For ideas on costumes and accessories, please see the "Party Extras" section at www.nightofmystery.com
